

Halifax Dentist Prepares for Retirement with Altima Dental Canada Inc.

Thursday November 19, 2020 (HALIFAX) – Altima Dental Canada Inc. have today announced a local partnership with Dr. Andre Dessureault in Halifax, NS, a dental practitioner with more than 25 years of clinical experience.

It is estimated that 70% of dentists in Canada will not to meet their retirement goals, especially with the increase in competition for patients with an increase in debt for most, combined with economic effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. Therefore, this partnership allows independent dentists across Canada to implement a beneficial model for their clinics and strategically plan for retirement, while ensuring that their patients continue to receive the highest standards of care that they are used to.

After assessing multiple options for retirement, Dr. Dessureault's is excited to have found a home with the Altima team. He says, "I spent a lot of time deciding on who I would like to partner with to prepare myself and my patients for my retirement. Altima made it clear that we shared values: they are care focused, like-minded, and business conscious. This gave me peace of mind that Altima was the best choice to help me achieve my long-term goals of seamlessly transfer my clients to another dentist and ensure that my patients continue to receive the best possible care they were accustomed to."

After establishing the largest Dental Service Organization (DSO) platform in 2019, Altima plans to continue supporting dentists across the country. "Needless to say, it has been a unique year for everybody. We are honoured to be able to help local dentists achieve their unique and long-term goals," explained Dr. George Christodoulou, Co-CEO of Altima Dental Canada. "At a time when many DSOs have taken a step back, we continue to strive forward towards our goals and continue support the dental community."

While Altima has experienced accelerated growth, its focus remains on providing the highest quality of patient care and nurturing the company culture that makes Altima a desirable place to work.
